Corkery's Conquest

ST MARY'S COLLEGE..... 12
CORK CONSTITUTION..... 13

By David Walsh

IN the end Constitution were too good and too proud to give up their Division One membership. Yet they got so close to the edge of the cliff that the wonder was they didn't fall over.

This was a desperately fought contest. Con playing as if their lives, Mary's playing as if their lives depended on the result. Templeville Road hummed to the passion of a do-or-die scrap.

Con's character was the factor which allowed them to hold on. Consider what injury has done to their backrow forces: Donnelly, Dineen, Howell and Slattery all lost. For yesterday's match they played Ray Clarke and Pat O'Hara on the flanks.

Cliffe has been playing junior rugby all season while O'Hara has been nursing a succession of injuries. He wasn't fit enough to play yesterday but had to. Through the second half his long standing groin strain caused serious discomfort but O'Hara remained one of the Con's big players.

Between the two flankers stood a teenager, an 18-year-old in a man's game, David Corkery. Remember the name, you will read more of him. Yesterday he had a staggeringly effective game, claiming the game's two tries, scoring another which Mr Sterling didn't quite see and generally performing like a quality No.8.

Coach Jerry Holland was, to put it mildly, appreciative: "David came in against Shannon and did well, against Garryowen last week he was superb and I thought he was absolutely brilliant today."

Corkery needed to do something special because Mary's were every bit as good, if not better than his side. Having enjoyed the big wind, Mary's turned round with a 9-4 lead and then raised their performance in the second period.

Brent Pope, Declan Fanning, Steve Jameson and Kevin Polls ran at Constitution and when big men run, smaller ones hurt. For 25 minutes through the second half Constitution trailed 9-7 and were sinking but Con were never accepting Division Two and even if it took a little magic from the No 8, there was no surprise in the late flourish.

With the wind, Mary's begun well and were six points clear after 10 minutes. Steve Hennessy's right boot delivering the points. Just then Mary's were controlling possession and Gearoid Doyle stretched Con with deep angled kicks but they did not create try chances and were never likely to establish a big advantage.

Inspired by some big O'Hara tackles, Con clawed their way into the game. A clever Keyes grubber was hacked on by Brian Walsh and Cork, who were in pursuit, his only rival being Mary's centre Ray Hernan who appeared to push to obstruct Corkery as they both dived.

Corkery is sure he got the touch but Mr Stierling ruled in favour of the defence. Can didn't let it bother them.

It looked good for Con then for the wind was worth more than five points but Mary's weren't quitting. Their new supremacy began in the line-out and developed from there. Much of their driving play ended in the pile of bodies which constituted the rucks. Mary's will feel aggrieved that Mr Sterling was slow to penalise those who killed ruck ball. Jamson took the law into his own boot six minutes into the new half and, from halfway, Murphy landed a fine kick. Nine-seven but Mary's were undaunted.

Jackson delivered more effective retribution when taking the ball in his hands and slashing through three or four attempted tackles, Pope surged off the back of scrums and Mary's were the better side. Then with the game slipping Con got a foothold in Mary's territory.

Kes missed a good penalty chance, tried and missed with two drop goals. Desperation stuff. Then Charlie Murphy charged forward, set up the rack and Keyes went blind. He linked with Kenny Murphy who slipped it on to Cortey. He had 20 yards to go and, goodness, how he flew!

Keys kicked a fin conversation which was critical as Hennessy landed a third penalty for Mary's eighth minutes from the end. At the sound of the final whistle, Con players and supporters danced and sung on the pitch.

A disgruntled Mary's supporter wondered aloud if Con had won the League. Jerry Holland had the appropriate response: "What we achieved today is as good as second or third place." Shannon and Ballymena wouldn't argue with that.

Cork Con escape drop

ST MARY'S 12

CORK CONSTITUTION 13

From Brendan Fanning at Templeville Road

CON survived. One point separated them from St Mary's yesterday, and the same margin stands between themselves and Lansdowne who are now bound for the second division. The scenes of delirium at the finish were reminiscent of Dooradoyle 12 months ago.

Then Con were celebrating a league title; this time it was league survival and it was hard to tell the difference between the two. When they take their place alongside the other eight teams in division one next season, this wet and windy day at Templeville Road will probably be far from their minds. Con's league campaign of 1991/92 will be one to be forgotten.

Last week against Garyowen, Con trailed by nine points at half time with the wind to support them in the second half. Yesterday they were just five points in arrears at the break from two Steve Hennessey penalties and a drop goal from Sean O'Beirne. But again Con made heavy work of using the elements, and again they lost the battle up front in the second half.

The St Mary's pack has developed into a strong and abrasive outfit in the last two seasons, and the addition of hooker Mick Corcoran and number eight Brent Pope this season has increased that development.

At times in the second half they rucked Con off the park, and as they grew stronger, Con's supporters grew more frustrated at the prospect of no further points.

David Corkery's first half score had been to Con as the away goal is to soccer teams in Europe, but with Steve Jameson and Declan Fanning doing particularly well out of touch, it was hard to see what the Cork side were going to build on. Mary's also had the better scrum, and, like Derek White for Scotland two weeks ago, Pope broke wide and at pace off the scrums to put Con in trouble. If Mary's had a backline capable of attacking quickly then that trouble could have been fatal.

Still, when Kenny Murphy slotted a penalty from the halfway line, four minutes into the second half, many in the Con camp would have felt that the wind would take care of the remaining two point deficit, so things were not too bleak.

Four minutes later Murphy had another go, this time from inside his own half, and was well off. It was when he missed another penalty from 45 metres on 13 minutes that the colour began draining from Cork faces. Having the wind, if not much possession, wasn't too bad if the kicks were going over. But if they weren't...

Their problems were compounded when Donal Lenihan had to retire dazed after 63 minutes to be replaced by Roy Healy. He reappeared on the sideline soon after to urge his teammates forward, and all of a sudden it was hard to imagine him as a player again. Healy meanwhile shared the jumping duties against Jameson with Pat O'Hara who demonstrated that his problems with injuries have done nothing to hinder his physical approach. He was in the thick of things right up to the finish.

Shortly after Lenihan's departure Ralph Keyes was off target with two drop goal attempts and a very kickable penalty to leave Con going into the final 10 minutes no better off.

Enter Corkery for the second time.

Initially there seemed little on as Con won a static ruck on the Mary's 22. But as Keyes switched direction to run the ball right, it became more promising: Keyes found Kenny Murphy in support and he in turn found Corkery on his shoulder.

The Con players were already jumping in the air before the number eight made it to the line. Pace is not a problem with this player. Keyes made a great conversion, the importance of which was brought home five minutes later when Hennessey converted his third penalty of the day.

It was a tense finish for Con as they struggled to keep Mary's pinned down. They just about managed it.

Corkery, Keyes save Constitution from relegation

TWELVE months ago Cork Constitution won the inaugural All Ireland League first division title to much acclaim at Dooradoyle. Last Saturday there was a different scene and a different challenge, as Constitution travelled to Templeville Road to play St Mary's College and this time the assignment for the great Cork club was survival.

Nothing but a win would suffice for that and it was duly attained.

The Constitution captain, Donal Lenihan, had been forced to leave the field — and he did it with the greatest reluctance — because of a neck injury 17 minutes from time. However, acute his discomfort, he did not leave the touchline but walked up and down urging on his players in the tense closing sequence in which the match was won and lost.

Constitution in the crucial final 10 minutes came from 9-7 down to 13-9 in front and saw the lead reduced to 13-12 when St Mary's full back Stephen Hennessy kicked a penalty for his side in the 76th minute. But they held out for a famous victory and the assurance of first division competition next season.

St Mary's were gracious in defeat, however disappointed they were at losing a match that was on a knife-edge for so long. Their players stood at the gate onto the field and waited until the songs and the celebrations had finished to applaud Constitution off the field.

It was a tremendously competitive match played in difficult conditions of wind and at times quite heavy rain and it was a 19-year-old who proved to be Constitution's scoring hero, number eight David Corkery. This highly-talented and promising youngster, who has been brought into the team only because of the acute injury problems Constitution have endured in the back row area, scored two tries for Constitution and the second came just nine minutes from time and at a period when Constitution were desperately seeking a score to erase the 9-7 deficit by which they trailed.

The try came when Constitution won possession just outside the St Mary's "25". Ralph Keyes went on the blind side, Kenny Murphy came up to take his pass and Corkery was on hand to gather Murphy's outside pass and beat a tackle to score wide on the right. That left Constitution two points clear but Keyes kicked a magnificent conversion to put his side a more comfortable four points ahead.

However, the drama was not over. St Mary's forwards, who had done so well, notably in the line-out, an area they dominated, took up the challenge and had Constitution defending desperately.

CONSTITUTION 13

Eventually Constitution conceded a penalty and Stephen Hennessy kicked the goal in the 76th minute and it was 12-13.

Constitution, to their credit, defended that precious one point advantage into the four minutes of injury time and then it was all over. Constitution had prevailed on the day and survived in the top sphere of Irish domestic rugby.

St Mary's, playing with the wind in the first half, enjoyed territorial advantage and were dominant in the line-out, where Steve Jameson, Kevin Potts, Brent Pope and Declan Fanning won a lot off the ball. But Constitution defended well, none better than Pat O'Hara. Time after time, it was O'Hara who stopped the advances of Pope off the side of the forward exchanges. O'Hara, the splendid Corkery and Ray Clarke, recalled to the senior scene in the crisis, did very well in a defensive role for Constitution.

Hennessy kicked St Mary's into the lead with a penalty after eight minutes and added a second in the 12th. Then Corkery almost got in for a try for Constitution after a good kick through by Keyes, but the referee decreed that the ball was not grounded.

However, Corkery struck a crucial blow in the 24th minute when the ball was moved right after a ruck and Corkery beat the tackle of Brian Ahern. Keyes failed to convert into the wind, but Constitution had reason to be satisfied with their work to that point. Then scrumhalf Sean O'Beirne dropped an opportunist goal for St Mary's in the 30th minute and it was 9-4 to the home side.

Five minutes into the second half, Kenny Murphy kicked a magnificent penalty from the halfway line, leaving Constitution just two points adrift 35 minutes to go and the wind at their backs. Almost 30 torrid minutes followed as Constitution went after the crucial score that would give them the lead.

St Mary's played well into the wind. Murphy and Keyes missed penalty chances and Keyes was wide with a dropped goal attempt.

Things were getting desperate and then enter Corkery for that vital try in the 71st minute. Keyes will never kick a more important conversion for his club than his superb kick from near the touchline. That was to prove decisive.

Garryowen

SEASONS shouldn't end anywhere else but Dooradoyle. Thus far the infant All Ireland League has twice chosen the correct setting for the final scene. Saturday, Dooradoyle, Limerick. The heart and name of rugby. The grass is scented with the freshness of spring's first cutting. The hunting is up. The air is laden with songs. The blazers are in the tent. The alickadoos are in the bar.

Frank Hogan, the great unadorned slab of a man whose shoulders have propelled Garryowen ever upwards over the last few years, plants the flag at the summit. Hogan has served the light blue well on the field. Off the field he has been inspirational. The granite face is frequently fissured by a steady stream of grins. The man who brought the sponsorship, the coach and the right attitude to the club savours the moment.

It is a moment made for savouring. The guests on this day of celebration are Young Munster, the assembled dignitaries of the city of Limerick and the press. The mood is buoyant, a feeling of fulfilment permeates. Everybody is thanked. "One thing," says Frank. "One thing I'd like to say to the members of the press. We had pictures all the way from Orlando last weekend. Why nothing from Cork?" The misdemeanours of a grocer are as nothing when set against rugby.
